

Related Puzzles

Allen was reading stories from Greek mythology and was fascinated by the story of Theseus and the Minotaur. In this story Theseus goes into the labyrinth to find a monster called the minotaur and must find his way out again. He unrolls a ball of string as he goes in and follows it out after he has killed the minotaur. Allen decided to pretend that his house is the labyrinth, and he is Theseus unrolling the string. He starts in the front door with his string. He wants to make the most efficient search through his labyrinth, and go only once through each doorway. Can he do it? What path should he follow? Here's the floor plan for his house:

Question: what are the bridges in this puzzle?