Problem 5. A total of 100 mages and necromancers are seated around a round table. Necromancers always lie, and mages always speak the truth, except when they are joking. Everybody declares that they are sitting between a mage and a necromancer, but it turns out that two of the mages are joking. How many necromancers are there at the table?